

We cut to Cam walking in the shop pulling his wallet out. He buys a few things. We notice Jimmy, the tom boy member of the gang, is behind the counter.

JIMMY

Can I help you?

CAM

Hey, I'm paying for the gas, can I get these too...?

Cam practically ignores Jimmy until he notices she is a girl.

JIMMY

What you folks doing out here?

CAM

Filming a movie baby. Yeah that's right. I'm the producer.

Jimmy is not stupid. She also looks skeptical.

JIMMY

Aren't you kind of young?

CAM

I just look young... clean living. Yeah we're filming a movie about this writer who died up here about 8 years back. You know anything about it?

Jimmy pauses for a long time.

JIMMY

I think. I think I remember reading something about a famous writer driving drunk off a cliff. That's why they put in the new rail there and that sign...

CAM

Wow, really? Hey would you say that for the camera that would be great. Here, sign this release.

JIMMY

Uh, no, thanks I'm not allowed to as an employee of, uh, Gas Corp.

CAM

Gas Corp?

JIMMY

Yeah. Against regulations. You aren't allowed to film on company property either, eh?

CAM

Ha-ha you said 'eh' that's awesome... Seriously though, relax. They're just getting some shots on the public property across the street of the mountain. We have the writer's daughter with us... big stuff.

JIMMY

I'm sorry I can't be in your film.
I really am.

CAM

Okay, that's cool. Hey you don't know if there are any campsites nearby...?

JIMMY

The only good one is a government campsite about 80 kilometers north of here on Wendigo Mountain. It should take you about an hour. Good luck hunting the Wendigo.

CAM

Hey what's a Wendigo?

JIMMY

It's a big ugly monster who eats
city kids likes you.

CAM

Is that an hour Canadian time or American time? Hey do you have cell phones up here? What's your number?

JIMMY

Out! Before I spray you with bear spray...

CAM

Call me!

Cam throws a business card at her. We cut to the door closing as Cam has left. We hear the sounds of slamming doors and a car driving away. Jimmy pulls out her cell phone and makes a call.